The Mission of Global Credit Data

'By banks, for banks'

Global Credit Data was created in 2004 by its Member Banks to provide them with a collection of historical loss data, analysis and research resources, to contribute to a better understanding of credit risk. Global Credit Data promotes the quality, the standardization and the transparency of data, thereby improving these Banks' ability to actively manage the credit risk of their portfolios.

Through its Methodology Committee and the active participation of its Member Banks, Global Credit Data provides an international forum for exploring the intricacies of credit risk management and sharing of best practice.

The Role:

The role involves a broad responsibility encompassing almost everything to do with the input, templates, standards, data quality, output and use of the credit data which is at the heart of Global Credit Data (GCD). The successful applicant is expected to become an expert on the GCD data models and to forge a strong working relationship with member banks at operational level and to be a part of the global Operations and Member support teams.

The work will be performed in liaison with the Executive Director, the Operations Manager, the Operations Executives, and also with the Methodology Committee and other working groups in accordance with the rules and procedures of GCD.

- Link between Member Banks, data agent helpdesk and Methodology Committee i.e. a dedicated line of support for members delivering data
- Support and demonstrate the use of GCD data by member banks, including training of member staff, presentations, visits, etc.
- Perform data quality investigations, extractions and basic analysis on the data as requested by the Executive Director, Operations Manager or working groups
- Participate with the Data Operations team in controlling data quality
