About Global Credit Data:

The Global Credit Data Consortium (the Association) is a non-profit registered association owned by 53 banks and financial institutions around the world. Its mission is to help banks understand and model their credit risks. Activities include pooling of credit loss data, especially for low default portfolios; providing benchmarks; facilitating knowledge exchange and fostering research. Through its staff currently distributed in Europe and North America, the Association runs databases, working groups, conferences and performs analytics, all dedicated to the needs of its members.

Overview:

The Global Credit Data Consortium seeks a new Executive – North America to be the representative of the Association in North America towards both existing and potential member banks as well as to help members to gather and analyse their data. The successful candidate will be based in North America and promote GCD's aims by supporting the pooling of data and method in credit risk, representing the association in the financial community and contributing to coordinate GCD's North American activities, and GCD's global activities as appropriate.

Key Responsibilities:

- Methodologies and member development
  - Work with existing members to increase their usage of the various GCD platforms and to improve their member experience
  - Directly support members to help them to gather data for GCD and to use this once returned.
  - Perform ad hoc analytics on GCD data for the benefit of members
